Introducing COLOR DUVET INSERT

It's time we bring back color!

"If you want to change the world, start off by making your bed."

-Navy Seal William H. McCraven

This is a very wise sentiment shared by Navy Seal William H. McCraven in his 2014 commencement speech at the University of Texas. It highlights the importance of bringing discipline into our lives and gives bed its due credit. Yes, the BED - one of the most banal objects in our lives. People love them but think twice about it only when they are visiting a hotel.

A rule of thumb for hotel beds is that they should be better than the one you have at home. For a customer, one of the best parts of staying in a hotel is the luxurious bedding. The soft, warm, and welcoming bed all equipped with a dive-in mattress, ultra soft pillows, cosy blankets, and of course, the melt-under-me duvet. The bigger catch here is that they be all in white.

Have you ever wondered how this fetish for white began?

It goes back to the 1990s that saw the rise of travel agents, loyalty programs, and offerings like free breakfast.

Hotel chains diversified greatly, and technology made booking easier. More people started travelling for business, and hotels started adding room-service, mini-bars, and other utilities. Hotel chains started focusing on building a differentiated factor.

One of the most upscale hotel chains in America, Westin Hotels & Resorts, did some research and launched the 'Heavenly Bed' - a stay as comfortable as you would presumably get in heaven, sans the angels of course. It was a complete departure from the earth-tone and cheap polyester bedspreads of the past. The entire bedding ensemble was white from the pillows to the sheets to the comforter. The concept resulted in a dramatic rise in customer satisfaction and loyalty. The idea was picked up by other hotels and soon enough it became a norm.

However, the favoritism for white comes at a price to the hotelier. Up-scale hotels can paint the entire hotel room white and not feel a pinch. But for a mid-scale hotel, maintaining anything white is incurring additional costs. White bedding means it needs to be spotless. One spill could force you to discard the whites all together. Another factor harped upon while singing praises of white bedding is that it can be washed easily, ideally using bleach. But the truth is the more you bleach a fabric, the more it will deteriorate the fabric and cause yellowing and wear soon. White fabric also develops yellow stains over time after exposure to sweat, body oils, or dead skin. In fact, human sweat has a component called lipofuscin that causes discoloration. So, all in all, you can use something white on a bed only for a few months before it beckons to be changed.

AGH Supply is trying to change this cost-incurring scenario - beginning with the duvet. We bring to you colour duvets that will not only enhance the décor of you hotel room but will also cost you much less in maintaining.

Our new duvets have dual colour, which means you could reverse the sides, switch the colour and present a new duvet to your guest at the cost of one. Thorough research has been put into selecting the perfect shades so that they easily blend with the décor of any room.

White is expensive, white is boring - which is exactly why people do not prefer using white bedding at home. They often go for 'Soothing Serenity' a.k.a. light blue, Rose Quartz, romantic florals, geometrics or bold themes. Then why should hoteliers be limited to just plain, simplistic, and unadventurous white?

It's time we bring back colour!
